The two-piece swimsuit we know today as the bikini has only been marketed and sold as such for 60 years. But archaeologists have discovered Minoan wall paintings from 1600 B. and Roman mosaics from 300 A. that show the bikini, so the ancients were livin it up. Still, it is the debut of the modern bikini in 1946 and its later modifications that truly define the swimsuit.

At some point in our lives, we will experience some sort of chronic pain that we positively hate and wish to go away. But as much as we seek pain relief immediately and despise the discomfort, the truth is that pain is useful to our survival as it alerts us to problems within our body. Pain also prevents a person from further injuring themselves and so it can be very useful. But, while useful, we all seek pain relief from time to time because-well, it hurts. A wide range of other mediations is also used to treat the condition, including antihistamines, immuno-suppressants, and antibiotics to treat skin infections.
